Honorable Nathan Triplett, Mayor of the City of East Lansing, announced today he is endorsing Curtis Hertel Jr. for the Michigan Senate. Nathan, joins a growing number of elected officials who have expressed their confidence in Hertel, and have supported his bid for the Senate Seat that will be vacant this fall.

Mayor Triplett expressed his support with the following statement: “As our Register of Deeds, Curtis Hertel has been a fighter for Ingham County families struggling to make ends meet during the Great Recession. As our next State Senator, I know that Curtis will bring that same fight to the legislature, where it is sorely needed today. I’m proud to call Curtis a friend and to endorse his candidacy.”

“It is important to to have the support of other dedicated public servants, and I’m proud to announce Nathan’s endorsement today,” Hertel said. “His endorsement is significant for this campaign, as it brings the mayors from the two largest cities on board. Should the people of this district choose me to be their next Senator, it will be a pleasure to work with community leaders like Nathan, to continue to make things better for the people of Ingham County.”

Curtis Hertel Jr. is currently the Register of Deeds for Ingham County. He was elected in 2008, won re-election in 2012, and recently announced his candidacy for the 23rd District of Michigan’s Senate.
